

Conference Communications Providing The Vital Link In The Subsea 7 – Acergy Merge

Aberdeen based Conference Communications (CCOMM) have been providing the technology and infrastructure for Subsea 7's entire campus since 2008 and last week supported one of the most important townhall meetings the company has had to date. Following on from the £3.6bn merger agreement announced on the 21st June, Subsea 7 organised a townhall meeting for over 5,000 employees across the globe including workers on vessels.

Working to a tight timescale following on from the merger news being distributed, CCOMM provided the all important high quality video link and the benefits of having an experienced, reliable and local technology partner were there for all to see as the mission critical event was a huge success, with special thanks coming from over 200 workers in Brazil who were able to attend.

Chris Gibson, who is the new Business Development Manager for the Oil and Gas sector at CCOMM, has noted that “this is a perfect example of why a robust and expertly designed VC system is so important to any organisation looking to the future and why we pride ourselves not only in our past performance but in what we can deliver in the future.”

“Our ongoing relationship with Subsea 7 coupled with our recent expansion to the management team here in Aberdeen have positioned CCOMM as the premier audio visual company operating in Scotland.”

Based in the heart of Aberdeen, Conference Communications provide Audio Visual management, support and consultancy to companies based in the UK and Internationally.
